► Suited up against yesterday's rain, mayoral candidate Clive Doucet rides with the Lynwood Village Community Association's political fun bike parade.

Doucet preps for decision day

"It's been dynamite," said Clive Doucet of the last weekend before today's municipal election. "We're surging in the polls. It's been a great time and we feel we've got a real shot at Mr. Watson and we've already passed Mr. O'Brien. People are liking our platform ... they like the light rail instead of the tunnel and they like the emphasis on communities first and they like the local advantage for businesses and farmers ... This is what we fought for, for a very long time and we're right where we want to be."

Watson proud of campaign

- Candidate estimates he's been to 30,000 doors
- Believes the vast majority of people have made up their minds about how they're going to vote

Looking back on his campaign the day before today's municipal election, mayoral candidate Jim Watson said he's proud of the work he's done over the last few months.

"I feel very proud of the grassroots effort that our campaign team has put forward," said Watson, who had a strong lead in recent polls.

"We stuck to the high road and offered a very positive plan for the future of the city. My campaign really reflects the diversity of our city, and I'm very honoured to have these (volunteers), young and old, come and support me."

"I'm very proud of our team and we'll celebrate one way or the another. If things don't work out, I'm still honoured to have had the opportunity to put my platform forward."

Watson said his vision is "well-thought-out and affordable."

"It's going to do the job to make sure we've got the kind of economic base for our kids and grandkids, it's going to move transit forward." — TRACEY TONG

Months of campaigning, debating, door-knocking and handing out flyers have all come down to this day.

Yesterday — the final homestretch before today's municipal election — candidates showed no signs of slowing down.

While mayoral incumbent Larry O'Brien spent the morning at an event honouring Senator Lebreton and the Best of Nepean at the Nepean Museum — and the afternoon campaigning at Place D'Orleans — candidate Clive Doucet made appearances at the Bruce Pit dog park and a bike parade in west Ottawa before canvassing on bike in Kanata.

Jim Watson spoke to voters in Chinatown and the Lansdowne Farmers' Market before hosting a volunteer barbecue at his campaign headquarters.

Candidates said yesterday that they were feeling good.

"I had a great final day of campaigning, covering the east and west ends of the city," said O'Brien.

"I hope that each and every resident who hasn't yet voted casts their ballot for mayor and councillor tomorrow, and look forward to the results."

"I think we can hold our heads high that we have run a classy, well-thought-out, positive campaign for the future of our great city," said Watson.

The top polled mayoral candidates will all be holding post-election parties.

O'Brien will be holding his party at Broadway Bar and Grill at 1896 Prince of Wales Dr., while Watson celebrates at the Ukrainian Banquet Hall on Byron Avenue.

Doucet's celebration is held at his campaign headquarters on Wellington Street.

The Ottawa International Writers Festival is wrapping up this week but not without the remaining speeches by a number of renowned authors.

William Gibson was at Mayfair Theatre yesterday giving a speech about Zero History, his latest novel in a sci-fi thriller trilogy.

The American-Canadian author has been described as somewhat of a visionary of the information age. He said he doesn't really know what's going on with technology and said

"In the age of broadcast television before the Internet, we could infer that the whole world was watching, but with a template like Twitter you can be there with the whole world watching."

WILLIAM GIBSON

"we have to guess how it's changing.

"We would turn on a computer and look through the screen and interact with it and then come back out," said Gibson of the early computer days. Now he said the Internet has "colonized this side of the screen and we live in a sort of semi-constant virtual state."

The festival, which officially ends tomorrow, will feature speeches from writers including Marina Nemat, Dave Bidini, and Andrea Levy. There will also be post-festival events on Wednesday, Friday, and through November. For the full lineup, visit writersfestival.org.

Cops probe weekend shooting

The Ottawa Police Guns and Gangs Unit are investigating after a man was shot near the 1900 block of Merivale Road yesterday morning.

At 2:10 a.m., police responded to a fight call where shots were fired. Paramedics treated a 37-year-old male with a non-life-threatening gunshot wound to his lower right leg. The man received pressure dressings and intravenous fluids and was transported to the Ottawa Hospital trauma centre, where he is in stable condition. Paramedics also treated a 25-year-old male for severe lacerations to his right hand and a 52-year-old male for facial injuries. ● TRACEY TONG

3 hurt in 5-vehicle pileup

Three people were injured in a five-vehicle pileup in south Ottawa Saturday.

Just before 2 p.m., a chain reaction involving three cars and two SUVs occurred following a rear-end collision in the north-bound lanes of Prince of Wales Drive, south of Bankfield Road. There were 14 people in the five vehicles. Paramedics treated three people, all in the car in the middle of the pileup, for injuries. The driver, a male in his early 20s, suffered minor injuries, while his front-seat passenger, a female in her early 20s, suffered neck injuries. The backseat passenger, a male also in his 20s, suffered back injuries. ● TRACEY TONG

Officers lauded

Two Ottawa police officers were honoured with the Medal of Bravery over the weekend. Gov. Gen. David Johnston awarded the Medal of Bravery to Ottawa police Const. Sean Ralph at a ceremony at Rideau Hall. Const. Alain Rochette will receive his insignia at a later date.

On Dec. 8, 2005, Constables Ralph and Rochette risked their lives in an effort to rescue a woman who was being stabbed by a man armed with a hunting knife in Ottawa. When the officers arrived, the attacker grabbed the victim, and dragged her inside her apartment. The officers crawled into the apartment through an opening they had kicked in the door, and the suspect surrendered his weapon. ● TRACEY TONG

Khadr's lawyer denies deal in war crimes trial

► Court appearance expected today, says his defence team
► Civil and legal-rights groups condemn process

A possible agreement by Guantanamo Bay's youngest inmate to plead guilty to war crimes hung in the balance yesterday with his Canadian lawyer emphatically denying a deal had been struck.

With prosecution and defence set to huddle with the presiding judge, lawyer Dennis Edney did suggest Omar Khadr would have little choice but to admit guilt when his military commission trial resumes today.

"All I can tell you is there's trial (today) and there's no deal in place as of this particular moment," Edney said.

Khadr's lawyers have previously confirmed plea

Now 24, Omar Khadr has been in U.S. custody since he was captured in Afghanistan at age 15.

► Pentagon Has charged him with five war crimes.

► Allegation Among other things, the U.S. accuses him of throwing a grenade that killed special forces Sgt. Chris Speer and blinded former sergeant Layne Morris.

talks were underway but refused to provide any details. However, according to numerous reports, a proposed deal would see Khadr plead guilty in exchange for serving another eight years in custody, most of them in Canada, on top of the eight he has already spent in prison.

U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton spoke to Canadian Foreign Affairs Minister Laurence Cannon on Friday, apparently to press the government of Prime Minister Stephen Harper to agree to repatriate Khadr.

With Guantanamo's lone westerner facing a possible life sentence if convicted at trial, Edney suggested his client's best hope of eventually seeing freedom would be to plead guilty before a trial.

Cholera closes in on Haiti camps

A spreading cholera outbreak in rural Haiti threatened to outpace aid groups as they stepped up efforts, hoping to keep the disease from reaching the squalid camps of earthquake survivors in Port-au-Prince.

Health officials said Saturday at least 208 people had died and 2,674 others were infected in an outbreak mostly centred in the Artibonite region north of the capital. But the number of cases in towns near Port-au-Prince were rising, and officials worried the next target will be hundreds of thousands left homeless in January.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

5 Red Cross spokesperson Julie Sell said teams would begin teaching people in refugee camps how to prevent cholera — starting today, Day 5, after the outbreak. "We're taking this very seriously," she said.

Imagine being barred from giving your own mother one last hug before going into space.

That's what happened to Canadian astronaut Bob Thirsk in May 2009, just before blast-off into space aboard a Russian spacecraft.

The incident is just one of many emotional moments recounted in My Countdown, a new book written by Lena De Winne — wife of the European astronaut Frank De Winne, who flew with Thirsk.

Lena De Winne said she wrote her book to show the human side of space flight.

Thirsk's wife of 25 years, Brenda Biasutti, said having her husband "literally off the planet required redefining the meaning of loneliness, separation and distance."

'Grim' living at Kingston Pen

► Lawyer says Russell Williams will likely spend 23 hours a day in a 2.5-by-3-metre cell ► Cannot receive calls

From flying military jets and meeting dignitaries to living in a cell the size of a walk-in closet at Kingston Penitentiary — Russell Williams has entered a "grim" existence.

The former airbase commander turned sado-sexual killer was sentenced Thursday to life in prison with no chance of parole for 25 years for the slayings of Jessica Lloyd and Marie-France Comeau.

As Williams was being promptly whisked away to the maximum security prison, the lead detective in the case said he'll serve his sentence in the segregation unit, home to some of Canada's most notorious inmates — including schoolgirl killer Paul Bernardo.

"In general people of his nature are taken down into solitary confinement, kept by themselves, they don't have access to any other inmates," Det. Insp. Chris Nicholas said.

Defence lawyer Tony Bryant, who represented Bernardo, expects Williams will be on the same range as his old client.

Bernardo's tiny cell — his home for the past 15 years — is not much larger than a typical household washroom, equipped with a cot, desk and toilet.

Prisoners can talk to the inmate in the adjoining cell, but can't see them at the prison.

Williams would likely be in the segregation unit for his own safety, said Bryant, adding prison officials have an obligation to take care of everyone — they can't pick and choose.

That doesn't mean Williams is free from the risk of physical harm.

Bernardo has been attacked and harassed at the prison. He was punched in the face by another inmate while returning from a shower in 1996. In June 1999, five convicts tried to storm the segregation range where he lives and a riot squad had to use gas to disperse them.

Enough drunks on road to clog courts: Study

► National study reveals men most often involved in impaired driving incidents ► Numbers vary by region

Courts, police forces and jails could be overwhelmed if the federal government ever lowered the criminal drunk-driving threshold, says an internal study by the federal Justice Department.

Cutting blood-alcohol limits for Canadian drivers to the level established in many other countries would likely double the number of cases in a justice system already struggling with the current caseload, it warns.

The internal study by Andre Solecki, of the department's Research and Statistics Division, mined existing justice databases but also contacted eight police forces — from Vancouver to Toronto — for raw data.

The current drunk-driving threshold is 80 mg of alcohol per 100 ml of blood. Provinces impose a lower threshold of .05 per cent, which allows police to seize licences and tow vehicles without charging the operator with criminal drunk driving.

The analysis of 2007 statistics showed a national rate of 241 impaired-driving incidents for every 100,000 people under the existing law, with about 80 per cent of the offenders male.

The national data also showed an 80 per cent conviction rate, with about one in 10 sent to jail. Most of the rest were fined.

The numbers showed strikingly different regional variations in how many charges are laid. Among the study's main findings is that lowering the threshold would send an estimated 9,429 extra people to jail — and severely tax the justice system to put them there.

A copy of the draft report, dated February this year, was obtained by The Canadian Press under the Access to Information Act.

Canadian retailers are placing big bets on small screens this fall whether it's the iPad, the BlackBerry Torch smart phone, or the Kobo e-reader. But they're also placing a bet on the new 3-D TVs, hoping to convert continuing demand for big screen TVs into sales of this brand new technology.

Real estate agents relax service rules

- Old rules 'anti-competitive': Competition watchdog
- New rules will remain in effect for 10 years

Delegates from Canada's 101 local real estate boards yesterday in St. John's, N.L., ratified a deal worked out by the federal Competition Bureau and the real-estate industry.

It would allow consumers to choose what services they want from their agent when selling their homes, and to pay for only those services.

The deal was reached after months of negotiations between the competition watchdog and the Canadian Real Estate Association that represents some 100,000 realtors.

Realtors currently operate on the principle that selling agents will split the standard five per cent commission with the buyer's agent.

"We are pleased that after careful consideration and reflection, real estate boards and associations from across Canada have endorsed the agreement," CREA president Georges Pahud said.

Under the deal, CREA has agreed that its rules as well as those of its members should not deny or discriminate against realtors wishing to offer mere posting services.

The Competition Bureau has been pressuring CREA to change rules it calls "anti-competitive" on behalf of realtors and consumers who want more flexible services. But experts say the doors to lower-cost services won't be thrust open overnight as the industry is dominated by traditional agents who are reluctant to change their business models. Currency talks

The world's leading advanced and emerging countries vowed Saturday in Gyeongju, South Korea, to avoid potentially debilitating currency devaluations, aiming to quell trade tensions that could threaten the global recovery.

The Group of 20 also said it will pursue policies to reduce trade and current account imbalances that threaten the economic recovery.

FDA rejects new drug

Arena Pharmaceuticals Inc. on Saturday said the Food and Drug Administration has rejected the company's application for loraserin, one of three drugs seeking to become the first new FDA-approved prescription weight loss drug in more than a decade.

The federal agency's rejection came after an FDA panel of experts on Sept. 16 recommended against approving loraserin in a 9-5 vote.

HUMBLE AND GRAND AT THE SAME TIME

Urban Compass

STEVE COLLINS

It's E-Day and probably time for the old get-out-and-vote pep talk. You know the one: "It's your city, make your voice heard." You could probably write it yourself by now.

But I'm afraid my credibility on the subject is a bit lacking. I'm not voting today. My inaction isn't any kind of statement or symptom of disillusionment with the choices on offer; I just didn't get around to it.

I'm out of town today and I was so busy I lost track of the advance voting days. And I've just moved to another ward, and on and pathetically on. I have a fine pile of excuses, but they're just that. A good friend of mine even offered to cast a proxy vote for me, but I declined. This is nothing more than half-assed citizenship, and I'm ashamed of myself.

The sensation grows worse when I see some signs of real commitment in others. A record number of candidates are standing for office today, 20 running for mayor or alone with varying degrees of plausibility. I feel even lamer about my laxity when I think about the only woman running for mayor, anti-poverty activist Jane Scharf, crashing candidates' debates to which she hasn't been invited and insisting on having her say until the cops drag her away. Sure, it's a bit kooky, but it's also passionate.

Voting feels good. I like the atmosphere at the polling station, often a school gym or a church. The automated phone messages, lawn signs, flyers and Twitter feeds all fade into the background, and it's just me and my neighbours lining up to do a little democracy. It's humble and grand all at the same time.

But I've never been an electoral extremist. I don't want to make voting mandatory or fine people for not casting a ballot. That defeats the purpose of making a choice and, frankly, if today is the only day you paid any mind to the issues that affect your city, if you really don't know what you think, maybe do the rest of us a favour and don't bother. Maybe no vote is better than a dumb vote.

Of course, the next time you catch me raving on about the latest fatuity issuing from city hall, feel free to remind me that the last time I had a chance to do something about it, apparently it was too much trouble. That should shut me up.

"That defeats the purpose of making a choice and, frankly, if today is the only day you paid any mind to the issues that affect your city, if you really don't know what you think, maybe do the rest of us a favour and don't bother. Maybe no vote is better than a dumb vote."

Some tasty findings

Worth mentioning

The ability to taste isn't limited to the mouth, and researchers say that discovery might one day lead to better treatments for diseases such as asthma.

It turns out that receptors for bitter tastes are also found in the smooth muscles of the lungs and airways. These muscles relax when they're exposed to bitter tastes, according to a report yesterday from researchers from the University of Maryland College of Medicine in Baltimore in the online edition of the journal Nature Medicine.

That surprised Dr. Stephen B. Liggett, a lung expert who noted that bitter tastes often are associated with poisonous plants, causing people to avoid them.

Liggett said he expected the bitter-taste receptors in the lungs to produce a "fight or flight" reaction, causing chest tightness and coughing so people would leave the toxic environment.

Instead, when scientists tested some non-toxic bitter compounds on mice and on human airways in the laboratory, the airways relaxed and opened more widely. The compounds "all opened the airway more profoundly than any known drug that we have for treatment of asthma or chronic obstructive pulmonary disease," Liggett said.

Metro Minute in Commissioners Park

Next time you're taking a fall stroll towards Dows Lake, pay a visit to The Man With Two Hats, a Netherlands-Canada liberation monument in Commissioners Park.

The plaque near the bronze monument — which was sculpted by Dutch artist Henk Visch — reads that during the Second World War, Canadian soldiers played a crucial role in the liberation of the Netherlands.

Through the donation of the monument the Netherlands pays lasting tribute to Canada.

An identical statue can be found near Het Loo Palace in Apeldoorn in the Netherlands, with the idea that the twin monuments symbolically link the two countries in friendship.

Quaid saga keeps getting weirder

► Actor and wife claim for asylum in Canada, saying they fear being 'murdered' like Heath Ledger and David Carradine ► Vancouver residents have best seats in the house for odd arrest

DARRYL DYCK/THE CANADIAN PRESS

► Evi Quaid, left, and her husband, actor Randy Quaid, are escorted from an Immigration and Refugee Board hearing in Vancouver on Friday. Actor Randy Quaid and his wife say they need asylum in Canada to escape "Hollywood star-whackers."

An upscale Vancouver neighbourhood is still buzzing after the arrest of actor Randy Quaid and his wife Evi, who are wanted in the United States on outstanding warrants.

Debbie Pfeifer, who works in a lingerie store in the Kerrisdale area, said she peered out the window Thursday afternoon when she noticed a police car blocking the road next to a bank.

Pfeifer said several plainclothes officers started milling about at around 3 p.m. as a tall, bearded Quaid spoke to a man she believes was his lawyer and Evi Quaid "popped in and out of a police car."

Pfeifer and her co-worker didn't know the drama unfolding before them and several shopkeepers for two hours involved a Hollywood actor and his "smartly dressed" wife, who wore a black puffy jacket.

"A customer came into the store and said, 'That was Randy Quaid out there.'"

Pfeifer said she hadn't seen Quaid, a former Oscar nominee, in a movie for a long time and didn't recognize him.

"Apparently the rumour was he was in the (bank) making inquiries about getting a mortgage or something and of course they put the information in the computer and it pulls up that there's a warrant out for him from the States."

Officials with the Canada Border Services Agency and police spoke with the Quaid's before their black car with California licence plates, possibly a BMW, was towed, Pfeifer said.

Quaid and his wife are wanted in the United States for allegedly breaking into a home they once owned and then failed to show up for a court hearing on felony vandalism charges.

They are now seeking refugee status in Canada.

Toronto immigration lawyer Lorne Waldman said the couple may end up living in Canada for at least six months, even if officials expedite a hearing after determining whether the couple is eligible to make refugee claims.

Drop Dead Diva actress connects with viewers

► Elliott portrays lawyer coming to grips with life in size 16 body ► Hit show renewed for a third season

Plenty of TV viewers have been captivated by Brooke Elliott's portrayal of a plus-sized lawyer on Drop Dead Diva, and the actress would like to see more normal-looking body types featured on other shows.

"Hopefully we'll get a little bit more realistic in what we're watching," she said during a recent interview in Madrid, where she was promoting the show.

Drop Dead Diva, about a shallow model who is killed in a car crash and reincarnated as a size 16 attorney, returns for a second season today on Showcase.

It's been a hit for the U.S. network Lifetime, which has renewed the program for a third slate of episodes.

Female viewers in particular seem to connect with Elliott's character, Jane Bingum, a brilliant, good-hearted lawyer adjusting to her new identity. The only people who know about her previous life are her best friend Stacy (April Bowlby) and her guardian angel Fred (Ben Feldman).

Fans have even gone wild for her wardrobe (Lifetime's website features a section where viewers can find out where to buy Jane's outfits).

"It's not easy, our stores don't really provide for anyone over a size zero, so sometimes that's tough (for people)," said Elliott.

But while the actress' frame is clearly an anomaly on the TV landscape, Elliott says she doesn't really think in those terms. Along with its strong

Drugs a challenge for Conviction Kitchen

► Chef Marc Thuet once again tries to transform ex-criminals ► This season he takes on Vancouver

Drug addiction loomed large on the second season of Conviction Kitchen, says celebrity chef Marc Thuet, who brought his gritty cooking show to Vancouver in a renewed bid to transform troubled ex-criminals into fine-dining chefs and restaurant staff.

Thuet and his wife and business partner Biana Zorich say the biggest obstacle for most of their motley crew was substance abuse, noting that one promising chef ended up overdosing during the series while another showed up high on heroin.

"Addiction was the number one cause of them being (in trouble with the law)," the burly French-born Thuet said Friday from the kitchen of his Toronto bakery.

"They're not convicts as much as they are addicts in Vancouver," Zorich added in agreement.

The series is more docudrama than food-frivolity as it traces the triumphs, and occasional failures, of some of society's most down-and-out.

While the first season began with 24 ex-cons at one of Thuet's Toronto eateries, the new season started with just 12 ex-cons assembled at a run-down martini bar blocks from Vancouver's Stanley

Park. They include 28-year-old heroin addict Justin, 25-year-old thief Cassandra, and 54-year-old bank robber Richard, who says he's spent more years in prison than out.

Thuet says the ex-cons' personal battles are laid bare throughout the series, with Justin showing up to work clearly high and Cassandra disappearing for three days only to return saying she'd been hospitalized for an overdose.

"To find drugs in Vancouver I think it's the easiest city," adds Thuet, who is also releasing a cookbook, French Food My Way, on Nov. 2.

"You go to East Hastings and it's like sending a kid to the candy store — you get everything."

Ingredients :

- 120 g (4 oz) duck breast, skin removed, fat trimmed
- 1 Bartlett pear
- 1 plum
- 1 fig, skin removed
- 2 Medjool dates
- 20 ml (4 tsp) blue cheese

- Garnish
- Sliced pickled black radish
- Julienned endive
- Cloudberry puree
- Sesame oil

Celebrity chef Marc Thuet, whose television series Conviction Kitchen has started its second season, loves to serve game in the fall — especially when he's been able to hunt it himself.

Thuet's cookbook French Food My Way is being published early next month. Here is a recipe from his new book that features duck in a beautifully arranged appetizer.

Pickled black radish and cloudberry puree are available at fine food stores, he notes.

Duck Carpaccio

Preparation:

- 1 Cut duck into 12 thin slices. Finely slice pear and plum. Cut 4 slices of fig and remove skin so you have 4 fig wheels. Cut dates in half lengthwise and remove pits. Fill 4 halves of dates with cheese.
- 2 In a small skillet over medium heat, toast sumac seeds or place them under broiler for 10 seconds.

- 3 Lay duck slices in middle of a serving plate, slightly overlapping. Fan out pear and plum slices around duck. Arrange frisee, fig wheels and dates studded with cheese on the plate.

- 4 Sprinkle with sumac seeds and drizzle with truffle vinaigrette.

- 5 Garnish with pickled black radish, endive, cloudberry puree and a small drizzle of sesame oil. Makes 4 servings. THE CANADIAN PRESS

GREEN SCREEN

QUESTION:

How can I be sure I'm purchasing the highest quality "green" goods?

- Nicole from Montreal, QC

Some manufacturers are making vague and misleading claims about their degree of eco-friendliness.

It's called "greenwashing." A study by TerraChoice Environmental Marketing tested more than 2,000 self-described environmentally friendly products in North America, and found only 25 were indisputably "sin free." The rest had been greenwashed.

Kids' toys, baby products, cosmetics, and cleaners are most often guilty of this deceit.

That means about 98 per cent of items labeled "natural" or "environmentally friendly" are making untrue claims.

A RAGS TO RICHES STORY

TurningPoint

TERESA KRUZE

TURNINGPOINTMEDIA.CA

She sat on the bed in the shelter and started to cry. Lia Grimanis was 16 and homeless after fleeing a violent home. "That night I decided I would become a role model. I wanted to be the person that came back to the shelter and said, 'I made it.'"

From a shelter, to welfare to starting her own business, Lia worked quickly. She moved into technology sales and was soon making $250,000 a year. Fifteen years passed and she was respected and successful beyond her wildest dreams but she still wasn't ready to tell her story.

Lia's turning point came one night while at a public meeting near her home in Toronto. People were upset a homeless shelter was being opened down the street. Finally Lia stood up and said,

Help is out there

Do you need help? Anyone can dial 211 to get confidential assistance

The numbers

- ▶ The Canadian Government estimates there are 150,000 homeless people
- ▶ Non-government sources say there are between 200,000 — 300,000 homeless people in Canada
- ▶ Toronto has the largest homeless population in the country

- ▶ Calgary's homeless population grew 740 per cent between 1994 and 2006
- ▶ Vancouver's number of homeless seniors nearly tripled between 2002 and 2005

Source: Sheldon Chumir Foundation

"Look at my face. Look at me. I was homeless."

The room fell silent and people stared. Then finally the man leading the meeting said, "With all due respect Lia, you're an anomaly." Then he went back to his tirade against the shelter.

The next day Lia launched a website called Up with Women where people could share their stories. The media started requesting interviews as she started programs and began to re-frame the experience of homelessness.

Lia recently quit her well-paying job in sales and is now focusing on Up With Women. She's living off of her savings, but that doesn't faze Grimanis. "I've lived frugally before and I'll do it again."

Now when she walks through the door of any shelter she is an inspiration to everyone in the room. Lia Grimanis can finally say, "I made it."

Research panel says reveal plagiarizers

In a report released last week, an expert panel appointed by the Council of Canadian Academies says academics found to have falsified data, plagiarized, and engaged in serious misconduct should be named publicly.

Although it recognizes the importance of maintaining individuals' privacy during an investigation, the panel says, "investigative findings should be reported and made public if an individual or institution is found guilty of research misconduct."

with internship

► Half of employers say they would consider hiring an intern

For university and college students dreading graduation, it may seem like the least probable fluke of fortune — the unpaid, unappreciated internship that blossoms into a salaried, respectable post, and a healthy paycheck.

With the economy still recovering, one might think that interns clutching half-page resumés find themselves at the bottom of the waiting list for in-demand jobs.

But even if you lack the moxie of a super-intern, mundane habits can establish your readiness for real-world work.

But as CareerBuilder.com coach Allison Nawoj explains, interns have a foot in the door — or more precisely, a reputation in the office — that can escalate them into entry-level work, or beyond.

“Getting a full-time opportunity out of an internship is more than likely,” Nawoj says. In fact, CareerBuilder’s most recent survey of employers estimates that at least half of bosses would slide a job offer to an intern — if said intern had the right stuff. “That’s an encouraging statistic for people to keep in mind,” she says.

The Internship Bible author Samer Hamadeh concurs. “If you’re a hard worker, you’re solid, you’ve got really good skills, the jobs will open up,” he says. “If you’re the type of person that genuinely wants to learn, then you’re what organizations really want.”

“If you’re not like that, you can’t really fake it,” he adds.

But even if you lack the moxie of a super-intern, mundane habits can establish your readiness for real-world work.

“Think of your internship as an extended job interview, which it kind of is,” Nawoj offers. “Meet deadlines, always be on time and be professional.”

Make friends, too, she adds.

“Ask people in the department if you can shadow them,” she suggests. “That shows that you’re seeking out challenges, who to intern for

► Some companies view interns as expendable transients revolving out the door each semester. But for a select few prestigious employers, internships are a structured method for harvesting talent:

Microsoft, Dell, Frito Lay, Goldman Sachs and Procter & Gamble all treat interns like future movers and shakers, Hamadeh notes.

► “We’ve talked to some interns at the CIA who’ve done some top secret stuff — policy papers on Russia they can’t even tell us about,” he says.

which is a great way to extend your internship into a full-time opportunity.”

Students make contact online

► Online degree programs help students form tighter and more intimate relationships

DREW HINSHAW
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

In a world that revolves as much around who you know as what you know, the university lawn was once the venue to come to know both: a place to take mind-swelling intro lectures, then share plastic beer cups with future dignitaries of America.

But as the new millennium's young transpose their social circles to the Internet, the emerging place for students to network is on the network — in online degree programs.

Once the domain of mouse-clicking shut-ins nabbing B.A.'s in their PJs, Internet-based coursework has become a top way to meet like-minded learners chasing similar careers.

"The issue of isolation and having to be completely independent in a degree program is beginning to become a secondary issue," explains Lessons From the Cyberspace Classroom author Rena Palloff.

"All the people who work in online programs are starting to build collaborative activities into their online courses to make sure their students stay in touch with each other and support each other."

That work is paying off big time, she says. Student's facility with social media, plus the smoke-screen of anonymity that online work offers, means that classmates are forming tighter, more intimate relationships in online programs than they would in daunting lecture halls. Which is great, The Virtual Student author Keith Pratt says, because students need serious peer-to-peer encouragement to follow through with their online coursework.

"Students shouldn't go in there thinking that they're going to be all by themselves," he says. "If students get isolated, they're not going to continue."

pick a program

► As you scout for online degree programs, make sure you select a school with plenty of planned peer-to-peer interaction.

"Research shows when it's not required, it doesn't get done," warns Michael G. Moore, editor of The American Journal of Distance Education.

► Once you've plugged in, reach out. "Connect on Facebook," Palloff recommends. "Oftentimes, in online classes the email addresses of classmates are available, so you can certainly connect.

"I'm just a player and I'm just going to show up tonight and play. I want to be on the ice. That's the bottom line."

ILYA KOVALCHUK, WHO REJOINED THE NEW JERSEY DEVILS' LINEUP YESTERDAY, ONE NIGHT AFTER HE WAS BENCHING BY COACH JOHN MACLEAN FOR AN UNDISCLOSED REASON.

"It was tough because I love the game so much. That's probably the worst when you watch your team, especially losing."

KOVALCHUK ON MISSING SATURDAY'S GAME, A 6-1 LOSS TO BUFFALO.

New era off to a quiet start

► First Sunday afternoon since NFL began crackdown on violent hits sees no players fined ► Players had been warned extensively by league

► New England Patriots safety Brandon Meriweather hits San Diego Chargers wide receiver Patrick Crayton yesterday.

Dolphins cornerback Sean Smith had Steelers receiver Hines Ward lined up, ready to deliver the big hit. Instead of going high, he went for Ward's legs. No fine or penalty for that one.

It was the sort of play that, most Sundays, would have gone unnoticed, especially because Ward returned to the field a play later after getting his knees checked out.

Yesterday was different, though, because it marked the first set of games since the NFL said it would be cracking down on illegal hits, handing out fines and threatening suspensions. Actually, Ward's brief absence, and the almost total lack of big shots in the afternoon's other NFL games, made it look a lot like any given Sunday, even if it's still too early to tell for sure how things are — or aren't — going to change over time.

"It's football," Ward said. "If you play this game worried about getting hurt, you will get hurt. It's a fearless game, it's a physical game, so the rule is the rule. You can't play this game scared. If you do, you won't last long."

With all but one of the day's 13 games complete, there were no cringe-inducing hits to replay on

No players were penalized for illegal hits to the head over the 12 afternoon games, giving the league every reason to believe its message got through.

the highlight shows — nothing the likes of what James Harrison, Brandon Meriweather and Dunta Robinson delivered last weekend in a spate of vicious plays that brought about hundreds of thousands of dollars in fines, along with repeated re-mindings that the league would be watching more closely from now on.

By sending out its various warnings — a memo from commissioner Roger Goodell, a video showing can- and can't-dos, lists sent to coaches letting them know which players have multiple unnecessary roughness penalties — the NFL is looking for more certainty in a sport that has many shades of grey.

"I've seen a change in players' behaviour in one week," NFL officiating chief Carl Johnson was quoted as telling Peter King on NBC's Football Night in America.

Steelers 23, Dolphins 22
The officials eventually got it right that Ben Roethlisberger fumbled at the goal-line. The Dolphins were still left feeling wronged yesterday.

An officiating mistake negated Roethlisberger's late fumble, and the Steelers kicked the game-winning field goal on the next play.

Jeff Reed made an 18-yarder with 2:30 left, allowing Pittsburgh to escape with a win.

Browns 30, Saints 17
David Bowens returned two of Drew Brees' four interceptions for touchdowns and the Browns stunned the defending champion Saints.

Rookie Colt McCoy passed for only 74 yards but got his first win as an NFL starter — a desperately needed one for the struggling Browns (2-5).

Ravens 37, Bills 34 OT
The Bills came close, but Billy Cundiff kicked a 38-yard field goal with 10:57 left in overtime after Ray Lewis stripped the ball from tight end Shawn Nelson, and Baltimore squeezed past winless Buffalo (0-6).

Joe Flacco threw three touchdown passes for the Ravens, who survived an uncharacteristic performance by a defence that was shredded for 505 yards. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Favre copped to voice mails: Report

► Brett Favre

Brett Favre reportedly admitted leaving voice mails for the former New York Jets game hostess to whom a website reports he also sent lewd photos.

Fox television's Jay Glazer reported yesterday that Favre told league investigators earlier this week he left phone messages for Jenn Sterger, who worked for the Jets in 2008 when Favre was their quarterback.

Fox did not say who provided the information. The NFL said it is not commenting on details of the investigation.

Glazer also reported Favre denied sending Sterger inappropriate photos.

The NFL is investigating a Deadspin report earlier this month that Favre sent the racy photos to Sterger two years ago. Sterger, now an on-air personality for Versus, has not co-operated with the league yet, but her manager, Phil Reese, told The Associated Press yesterday that could happen soon.

Short Stuff; you're the love of my life, and the diamond in my rock. I want the whole world to know.

FRAY

Victor, I am extremely lucky to have such an incredible boyfriend! Your optimism and smile is what keeps me going. Happy Birthday!

LOVE, MOO

Ms. Candace, trust your heart as I trust your heart and open yourself to all possibilities. Thank you so much for making my life better and remember I'm here to do the same for you.

LOVE, MR. SABLE

g-money since the relationship started I'm the happiest I've ever been, I still get butterflies when I'm in your presence. I hope you are willing to take it to the next level. Love always and forever,

YOUR RITALIN ROCKET

Today's horoscope

♈ Aries March 21-April 20 If you start the week in a panic you will regret it by midweek. You may be under the impression that if you don't get certain things finished now they won't get done at all but that's simply not true. Stay calm.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21 You have made more than enough sacrifices in recent weeks and anyone who wants you to make more must be told in no uncertain fashion that you've done all you are going to do for them.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 You need to deal with relationship problems now — and that means right this very minute. If you don't there will be a rather messy clash of egos.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 Make the most of the next few days to get your daily routine in some kind of order, because if you don't you will be snowed under with work.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 23 This should be a highly productive time for you, but take care you don't agree to things you might regret later. Even a Leo has to pick and choose between commitments. You cannot do everything, nor should you want to.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24-Sept. 22 Make time for other people today, especially those people whose help and assistance have been invaluable to you in the past. You may need to call on them again this week, so be nice.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 Stick to what comes easy to you today because if you tackle challenges that are beyond your area of expertise you could get yourself in a serious muddle.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 How do you change your life for the better? Have you considered that the best way might be to change nothing at all? If you leave well alone, everything will turn out for you just right.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 Do you give in to others' demands for the sake of a peaceful life, or do you stand up for yourself? Only you can decide but later in the week you'll be a lot more assertive.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 If you are not 100 per cent sure that what a friend is proposing is in your best interests then give it a miss. You don't have to go along with their plans just to please them.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 You may have encountered opposition on the work front from your employer or a senior colleague but today's Mercury-Venus link will help you win them round.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 What you are faced with today is essentially a practical problem, so keep your emotions out of it. You have a good head on your shoulders. Use it.
